This week at Cowbridge School ...

This week Cowbridge School has been filled with the kind of energy that reminds us why the creative arts and literacy are so fundamental to our students' development.

Thursday saw a fantastic celebration of World Book Day. It was wonderful to see students and staff alike embracing the joy of storytelling. Beyond the pyjamas in Lower School and the creativity across the school, the day served a vital purpose: fostering a lifelong love of reading. Whether it was through shared reading sessions or discussing favourite characters, everyone had the opportunity to engage with reading. As part of our commitment to the National Year of Reading, we continue to ensure that every student finds a "hook" into reading, and days like this are essential milestones in that journey. We also had the distinct pleasure of hosting the National Youth Jazz

Orchestra. Our students were treated to a masterclass in skill, improvisation, and teamwork. Watching our young musicians engage with performers of such high calibre was incredibly inspiring. It wasn't just a concert; it was a profound learning experience that extended well beyond the traditional classroom walls and, again, you can read more about this by clicking the link on the right.

Finally, there is an opportunity to reflect on the success of last week's Eisteddfod by reading more about it - the link is on the right!

Have a lovely weekend
