This week at Cowbridge School ...

This week at Cowbridge School, the atmosphere has been defined by a significant shift toward the examination season, marking a pivotal moment for many of our senior students as they begin to see the fruits of their long-term dedication.

Our linguists have been at the forefront of this effort, with the A Level German oral examinations taking place. Mastering a second language to this level requires not only academic rigour but immense personal courage. It has been a privilege to witness our students articulating complex ideas with such fluency and confidence. Simultaneously, the creative pulse of the school remains strong as the Year 13 Art exam is now well underway. The art rooms are currently hubs of intense focus, filled with ambitious projects that reflect years of technical development and personal expression. We are incredibly proud of the resilience these students are showing during these long, practical sessions.

We understand that this period can be a demanding time for families as well as students. To support you in navigating these coming months, we have published our guide to Supporting Your Child Through Exam Season. This resource is designed to provide practical advice on managing revision schedules, maintaining well-being, and creating a positive study environment at home. We encourage all parents, especially those with children in Years 10 and 13, to review this guide as we work in partnership to ensure every student feels prepared and supported.

Have a lovely weekend!
