This week at Cowbridge School ...

As we wrap up another productive week at Cowbridge School, it is a pleasure to reflect on the diverse range of activities that have filled our classrooms and corridors. From the focused intensity of students undertaking examinations to the collaborative spirit in the Lower School, the breadth of our students' commitment to their personal and academic growth continues to impress us.

Our Lower School students have spent much of this week exploring the core value of teamwork. It has been wonderful to observe them participating in various collaborative projects, learning that success is often achieved more effectively when we work together towards a common goal. This focus on interpersonal skills is foundational to their development, and we are proud of how they have embraced the challenge of supporting one another.

In the Sixth Form, our Year 13 Art students reached a significant milestone this week. They have just completed their 15-hour practical exam, spread across three intense days. The level of focus, creativity, and stamina displayed by these students was truly remarkable. We look forward to seeing their final pieces curated soon; they are a testament to years of hard work and artistic development.

Finally, a reminder to ensure all students are prepared for the shifting weather. As we move further into the term, a water-resistant coat is essential for outdoor break times.

We wish all our families a restful and relaxing Bank Holiday weekend! We look forward to welcoming everyone back refreshed and ready to continue the Summer Term on Tuesday!

Have a lovely weekend!
