This week at Cowbridge School ...

First and foremost, we were absolutely delighted to host our rearranged Expressive Arts Exhibition. It was a wonderful celebration of our students' immense talent, dedication, and artistic vision. Seeing the community come together to appreciate the diverse and mature range of work on display was a true highlight, and we are immensely proud of everyone involved. The artistic inspiration continued for our Year 12 Art students, who had the unique privilege of participating in a specialised painting workshop with John Hicks. This was an invaluable opportunity for our young artists to refine their techniques, experiment with new mediums, and gain first-hand insights from a professional artist.

On Thursday, 2 July, our creative horizons expanded even further as Year 10 and Year 12 Art students travelled to London for a brilliant trip to the Tate Modern. Immersing themselves in world-class contemporary art provided immense inspiration that will undoubtedly fuel their upcoming coursework and personal projects.

Alongside our artistic endeavours, our geologists have also been busy in the field. This week saw our students undertaking vital Geology Fieldwork, stepping outside the classroom to apply their theoretical knowledge to real-world landscapes and develop their practical investigation skills.

As we head into the weekend, we would like to thank our dedicated staff for organising these enriching experiences, and our students for representing Cowbridge School so impeccably throughout the week.

Have a lovely weekend!
