This week at Cowbridge School ...

What a wonderful and energetic week we have had across the school. The absolute highlight of our week was a very special visitor to our Nursery and Reception classes: The Gruffalo himself!

The visit was organized to celebrate the publication of Julia Donaldson's newest book, Gruffalo Granny, and it brought immense joy and magic to our youngest learners. Seeing the children's faces light up as they interacted with a beloved storybook character was unforgettable. Beyond the excitement and big hugs, moments like these play a vital role in our broader educational philosophy.

Fostering a deep love of reading from a very young age is central to our school mission. We believe that when children connect joyfully with stories in their earliest years, it builds the foundation for positive reading habits that last a lifetime.

Literacy is not just an academic skill—it is a gateway to imagination, empathy, and lifelong curiosity. We encourage you to carry this excitement home over the weekend by sharing a story together with your children.

As the autumn weather continues to settle in, please remember to send your children to school with warm, water-resistant coats so they can comfortably enjoy their outdoor play every day.

Thank you for your ongoing support in creating such a vibrant, reading-rich community. Wishing you all a restful and enjoyable weekend!

Have a lovely weekend!
