This week at Cowbridge School ...

As we reach the end of another busy and fulfilling week at Cowbridge School, it has been wonderful to see our pupils engaging so enthusiastically with both our local environment and our vibrant Welsh culture.

Learning beyond the classroom has taken centre stage once again, with our Year 11 Geology students embarking on an enriching field trip to Ogmore-by-Sea. The trip provided a brilliant opportunity for pupils to put their classroom knowledge into practical application. Exploring the striking coastal cliffs, students put their fossil hunting skills to the test, discovering an abundance of fossils embedded within the rock faces. It was fantastic to watch them piece together the geological evidence presented by the landscape to uncover stories millions of years in the making. Fieldwork like this plays a vital role in bringing academic subjects to life, and we are immensely proud of the curiosity, dedication, and analytical thinking shown by our young geologists throughout the day.

Inside school, we have also been celebrating Diwrnod Shwmae—a wonderful day dedicated to celebrating and promoting the use of the Welsh language across our school community. It has been heartening to hear both pupils and staff starting conversations with a friendly "Shwmae!" and taking every opportunity to use Welsh in their daily interactions.
